DRAFT OF THE PROJECT HEALTH FORUM OF SOUTH EASTERN EUROPE

Belgrade, 2017

DRAFT OF THE PROJECT

HEALTH FORUM OF SOUTH EASTERN EUROPE

INTRODUCTION

The global economic crisis is posing serious challenges to health policies and health systems all over the world. The challenges we have been faced with call for re-examination of performance, sustainability and remodeling of the health systems. Innovative solutions and new approaches to meeting the health sector needs, as response to the challenges, require more intensive exchange of experiences and information and more intensive global and regional cooperation. Furthermore, the process of implementation of the New European Health Policy - Health 2020 by WHO member countries of the European Region requires joint efforts and opening of the functional communication channels.

CURRENT SITUATION AND EXPERIENCE

SEE countries which, being part of the European continent, share geographic, demographic, economic and political specificities are faced with similar challenges in terms of preservation and improvement of health. Experiences of transition, European integrations, health system restructuring and especially similar problems with demographic trends and chronic non-communicable diseases pose a necessity to more efficient integrated approach.

Good experiences within the institutional forms of the regional cooperation over the past two decades (former SEE Stability Pact, Regional Cooperation Council and South East European Health Network) prove to be an insufficient framework for more flexible and comprehensive communication in the years of the crisis. Incoherent present analyses and particular approaches of the interested institutions (Government, WHO, OECD, WB, etc.) prevent reaching efficient and comprehensive solutions. An additional weakness of the existing institutional capacities is absence of experts from academic and professional institutions, representatives of the associations of patients and representatives of pharmaceutical industry. Clear need for new approaches and information in the field of public health, health economics and management has been proved by large interest of South-East European countries for non-institutional for a such as European Health Forum in Gastein and Innovative Initiative in Rovinj (2012). However, analysis and comprehensive approach to health and health systems of South-East European countries were not adequately covered at these meetings.

The crisis made us aware that there are no universal and unique recipes and approaches. On the contrary, what we need is specific, adjusted solutions. Health systems of the countries in SEE with their similar performance, as well as similar health needs and challenges call for an advanced model of communications.
